Figure 1 is a line graph showing the percentage of respondents who believe that the U.S. should take action to reduce global warming, broken down by age group (18-29, 30-49, 50-69, 70+) and gender (Male, Female). The Y-axis represents the percentage of respondents, ranging from 0 to 100. The X-axis represents the percentage of respondents who believe the U.S. should take action. The legend indicates that the solid line represents 'U.S. should take action' and the dashed line represents 'U.S. should not take action'. The graph shows that a majority of respondents across all age groups and genders believe the U.S. should take action to reduce global warming, with the highest percentage of respondents in the 18-29 age group (around 85%) and the lowest percentage of respondents in the 70+ age group (around 65%).
